

ABSTRACT

Fluorine is implanted directly into the channel region of a PMOS transistor structure, thereby improving the noise and V_T drift margin of device performance by introducing Si-F complexes at the substrate-gate oxide interface.